Some of the Red Room children have been interested in the enveloping schema by exploring paint, to make lines and circles and then painting over them or covering the glass doors in paint. Others experimented adding the paint from paint brushes to the water tray and watching the water change colour. Next we will, be exploring paint using our whole bodies whilst listening to classical music, by examining the patterns that wellies make on paper using paint when they move around as well as exploring marks made using water outside with a variety of brushes, rollers and sponges. Making marks outside allows children to try BIG strokes and brush marks. Using water on a warm day means that your child can use a paint brush and bucket, a spray bottle filled with water or sponges and a bowl of water to make long lines or cover large areas Download the app <https://bradford.50thingstodo.org/app/os#>
